VALIDUS COMMENCES EXCHANGE OFFER

TO ACQUIRE TRANSATLANTIC STOCK

Unable to Commence Discussions with Transatlantic

Due to Precondition of Standstill Provision

Pembroke, Bermuda July 25, 2011 Validus Holdings, Ltd. (NYSE: VR) ( Validus or the Company ) today commenced an Exchange Offer for all of the outstanding shares of common stock of Transatlantic Holdings, Inc. (NYSE: TRH) ( Transatlantic ). Under the terms of the Exchange Offer, Transatlantic stockholders would receive 1.5564 Validus voting common shares and $8.00 in cash for each share of Transatlantic common stock they own. The terms and conditions of the Exchange Offer are set forth in the offering documents that Validus is filing today with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Ed Noonan, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Validus, said, We continue to hope to work cooperatively with Transatlantic to provide the benefits of our Superior Proposal to Transatlantic stockholders, and to this end we have provided Transatlantic with a mutual confidentiality agreement which we are prepared to execute immediately. However, Transatlantic has insisted that as a precondition to discussions and an exchange of information Validus agree to a restrictive standstill that would prevent us from pursuing our Superior Proposal for Transatlantic without Transatlantic Board approval. This position is inconsistent with the Transatlantic Board's previously announced determination that the failure to enter into discussions with Validus would result in a breach of its fiduciary duties, and would effectively give the Transatlantic Board a veto over our transaction which we cannot accept. Therefore, we plan to continue the steps required to bring the higher value of our Superior Proposal directly to the Transatlantic stockholders.

Today Mr. Noonan sent a letter to Transatlantic's Board, the full text of which is presented below:

July 25, 2011

Board of Directors of Transatlantic Holdings, Inc.

c/o Robert F. Orlich, President and Chief Executive Officer

Dear Messrs. Press and Orlich:

I am writing regarding your letter of July 23, 2011 and the draft confidentiality agreement you provided to us. We have commented on this draft, returned it to Transatlantic and are prepared to execute the confidentiality agreement we returned so that our two companies may commence discussions and exchange information. Our revision to the agreement removes the standstill provisions that you included which would contractually prohibit us from pursuing our Superior Proposal for Transatlantic without Transatlantic Board approval.

In light of the statements in your press release of last Tuesday that the Transatlantic Board determined that the failure to enter into discussions with Validus would result in a breach of its fiduciary duties, I was surprised to learn that you are insisting that we agree to standstill provisions as a precondition to such discussions. Were we to agree to such restrictions, we would be foregoing our right to pursue our Superior Proposal for Transatlantic. In fact, we would be precluded from making any offer for Transatlantic without your express consent, as well as being precluded from encouraging Transatlantic's stockholders to vote against the proposed inferior Allied World acquisition of Transatlantic. We believe that Transatlantic preconditioning any discussions on our agreement to these restrictive provisions is inconsistent with the Transatlantic Board's fiduciary duties to its stockholders and is not required by your merger agreement with Allied World. Clearly this is not a condition that we can accept and your position causes us to question whether your overture of last week was genuine.

While we continue to hope that it is possible to reach a consensual transaction with Transatlantic, we do not believe that it is in your stockholders' best interests to give the Transatlantic Board a veto right over whether our Superior Proposal is made available to them. Accordingly, we are proceeding with our previously announced course to take our Superior Proposal directly to Transatlantic stockholders by commencing an Exchange Offer for all of the outstanding shares of common stock of Transatlantic for 1.5564 Validus voting common shares and $8.00 in cash per share of Transatlantic common stock and to continue to solicit Transatlantic stockholders to vote against the approval of your sale to Allied World. On behalf of your stockholders, we would encourage you not to take further action against their best interests by attempting to set roadblocks in our path.

We remain open to engaging in discussions with Transatlantic and exchanging information regarding Validus' Superior Proposal. However, such discussions cannot be constrained by preconditions that eliminate Validus' ability to pursue our Superior Proposal.

Sincerely,

/s/ Edward J. Noonan

Edward J. Noonan
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

Details of the Exchange Offer

The Exchange Offer will expire at 5:00 p.m., Eastern time on Friday, September 30, 2011, unless extended. The offering documents, including a preliminary prospectus/offer to exchange and a related letter of transmittal, describing the Exchange Offer and the means for Transatlantic stockholders to tender shares of Transatlantic common stock into the Exchange Offer will be delivered to Transatlantic stockholders. Stockholder questions regarding the Exchange Offer or requests for offering documents should be directed to Validus Information Agent for the Exchange Offer, Innisfree M&A Incorporated, toll-free at (877) 717-3929 (banks and brokers may call collect at (212) 750-5833).

Validus Superior Proposal

Validus has delivered to the Board of Directors of Transatlantic a Superior Proposal that provides a 27.1% premium to the June 10, 2011 Transatlantic unaffected share price of $44.01,<sup>(1)</sup> and a 3.7% ($1.83 per Transatlantic share) premium to the current implied value of the Allied World transaction.<sup>(2)</sup> In contrast, the implied value of Allied World's offer currently represents a 6.1% discount to the Transatlantic share price.<sup>(2)</sup>

Transatlantic stockholders would benefit from the receipt of a superior currency in Validus voting common shares which have delivered a total return (including dividends) of 55% since Validus' IPO in 2007, compared to Allied World's total return of 24% over the same period and historically have traded at higher price to book value multiples and have deeper liquidity than Allied World stock.<sup>(3)</sup> In addition, Validus Superior Proposal includes a significant cash component of the total consideration, in contrast to the all-stock Allied World transaction.

(1) Based on Transatlantic ($44.01) closing price on June 10, 2011 and Validus ($30.81) closing price on July 12, 2011, the date of the Validus proposal. Under the Validus proposal, Transatlantic stockholders would receive 1.5564 Validus voting common shares in the merger and $8.00 in cash per share for each Transatlantic share they own.

(2) Based on Validus ($27.70), Transatlantic ($52.50) and Allied World ($56.00) closing prices on July 22, 2011. Under the Allied World offer, stockholders of Transatlantic would receive 0.88 Allied World common shares for each Transatlantic share they own.

(3) Total shareholder return based on closing prices from July 25, 2007 to June 10, 2011 and assumes dividends are reinvested. See Validus July 12, 2011 press release "Validus Announces Superior Proposal for Combination with Transatlantic Holdings" and July 13th investor presentation "Validus Superior Proposal to Create a Global Reinsurance Leader," slide 10, which are available on the company's website at www.validusholdings.com, for additional details.

Transatlantic stockholders also would benefit from ownership in the combined company, which would have:

- A Compelling Business Plan. The combination of Validus and Transatlantic will create a unique, global leader in reinsurance – a large, nimble company deploying capital effectively to maximize underwriting profitability and achieve superior growth in book value per share. The combined company will be a recognized leader in multiple classes, emphasizing short-tail lines, while being well-positioned for cycle management.
- Superior Size and Market Position. The combination would create a geographically diversified company with a top six reinsurance industry position on a pro forma basis. The merged companies would have gross premiums written over the last twelve months of approximately $6.1 billion as of March 31, 2011. As the level of capital required to support risk will continue to rise globally, Validus believes that size will become an even more important competitive advantage in the reinsurance market.
- Significant Potential Combination Synergies. In addition to the aggregate earnings power of a combined Validus/Transatlantic, Validus believes there are significant opportunities to expand earnings and return on equity through combination synergies. The Company believes these potential synergies substantially exceed the $80 million cited by Allied World and Transatlantic on their joint June 13, 2011 conference call. Validus does not expect material employee-based cost savings.
- Substantial Opportunity to Return Value to Shareholders. Validus estimates that the combination of Validus and Transatlantic creates $1.1 billion of pre-synergy, pre-catastrophe earnings power, which can be available for expanded share repurchase activity. Active capital management is a core element of Validus' strategy and has contributed to the premium valuation accorded to the Company. In total, Validus has returned to shareholders $1.55 billion of excess capital since its acquisition of IPC in 2009.
