Eaton Increases Revolving Credit Capacity to $2.0 Billion and Issues $600 Million of Long-Term Notes at Historically Low Coupons

CLEVELAND Diversified industrial manufacturer Eaton Corporation (NYSE:ETN) today announced that it has completed several financing transactions in advance of the Cooper Industries plc acquisition announced May 21, 2012. These transactions both enhance the company's liquidity position and capitalize on favorable market conditions for investment grade corporate debt. With these actions, Eaton has begun to establish the permanent capital structure of the company associated with the closing of the Cooper acquisition expected this fall.

The completed transactions include:

Refinancing two revolving credit facilities that were to expire within a year

Two new $750 million facilities have been put into place to replace two expiring $500 million facilities

The new facilities will expire in June, 2015, and June, 2017

Additionally, Eaton's $500 million facility expiring in June, 2016 was amended to contemplate the Cooper transaction

Edgar Filing: EATON CORP - Form 425

Total committed credit in Eaton's revolving credit facilities is now $2.0 billion, up from $1.5 billion

Increasing the capacity of Eaton's commercial paper program to $2.0 billion from $1.5 billion

Issuing $300 million of 9-year notes and $300 million of 11-year notes

Achieved historically low coupons of 3.47% on the 9-year notes and 3.68% on the 11-year notes

The additional credit capacity, liquidity and low-cost debt actions were taken to enhance the company's capital structure ahead of the Cooper acquisition. All three credit facilities will remain effective and in place under the new Irish parent company.
