Urban League of Metro Seattle CEO: 5G is the first real opportunity to bridge the digital divide

We view the proposed merger as a complementary asset to the work we do, as it will be an investment in people, in business, and in innovation. A 5G network offers a lower-cost option that matches fixed lines in speed and access and represents the first real opportunity to bridge the digital divide for disadvantaged communities.

- Michelle Merriweather, President & CEO

Vermont Business Roundtable CEO: Merger stimulates job growth and community investment

Approval of this merger will, among other things, lead to expanded rural access to high-speed Internet and expanded broadband, [ ] launch the broader deployment of 5G infrastructure and would stimulate job growth and community investment in Vermont and across the country.

- Lisa M. Ventriss, President

Napa County Farm Bureau CEO: The New T-Mobile 5G Network delivers important public interest benefits

The merger of T-Mobile with Sprint will help rural communities by expanding access to high-speed internet. The accelerated deployment of a 5G network will deliver important public interest benefits to rural communities. The 5G network that T-Mobile has proposed to deploy following its merger with Sprint would provide [ ] dependability and will allow our members to benefit from the ongoing technological revolution in smart agriculture.

- Ryan P. Klobas, CEO

United States Hispanic Chamber of Commerce CEO: Merger creates economic opportunity for Hispanic businesses

[USHCC] strongly believes that the T-Mobile-Sprint merger will create economic opportunities for Hispanic businesses, and will enable more Hispanic people than ever before to compete in the modern economy. The New T-Mobile's speed, capacity and, above all, true nationwide 5G coverage, will support entrepreneurship, innovation and economic growth within the Hispanic community, helping create and sustain prosperity for Hispanic business owners to the benefit of the American economy.

- Ramiro Cavasoz, President & CEO
