At its meeting in December 2015 the US Federal Reserve (the Fed) raised interest rates for the first time in nearly a decade. More specifically, the US central bank increased the federal funds rate from a range between 0% and 0.25% to a range between 0.25% and 0.50%. However, since that time the Fed has paused increases in interest rates and has downgraded its expectations for growth in the US for 2016. AllianzGI Diversified Income & Convertible Fund

For the period of February 1, 2016 through July 31, 2016 as provided by Doug Forsyth, CFA, Portfolio Manager.

For the six-month period ended July 31, 2016, the AllianzGI Diversified Income & Convertible Fund (the Fund) returned 18.13% on NAV and 22.41% on market price.

During the reporting period, the Russell 1000 Growth Index, a measure of growth style stocks, returned 12.42%; high-yield securities, as reflected by the BofA Merrill Lynch High Yield Master II Index, returned 13.88%; and convertible securities, as reflected by the BofA Merrill Lynch All Convertibles Index, returned 13.66%.

Market Overview

The path for convertible, high yield and large-cap equity markets was higher over the reporting period.

The market began 2016 by continuing last year s downward trend, trading sharply lower through mid-February 2016. The markets then turned dramatically higher, experiencing only a brief setback when the UK public voted to exit (Brexit) the European Union, and rallied into the end of July as investors gravitated toward riskier assets.

Strong US Treasury demand, driven by a weak global bond yield environment, had a positive impact on high-yield and convertible bonds, as investors sought yield-oriented assets.

Fed communications continued to influence sentiment throughout the reporting period as investors interpreted Fed Chair Janet Yellen s remarks. Outside of the US, aggressive quantitative-easing measures by global central banks remained in place, and on balance, this accommodative environment helped support the performance of risk assets.

Evidence of the appetite for risky assets was apparent when examining the returns for bonds by their credit ratings within the high-yield asset class. The lowest-quality, most distressed issues substantially outperformed higher-quality bonds. This credit dynamic was also evident in the convertible market.

US economic data continued to be mixed, but overall, the trend in economic data reinforced the favorable conditions for high-yield bonds, convertibles and stocks.

Finally, improving industry dynamics helped lift the price of crude oil and aided in the stabilization of other commodity prices. This had a positive impact on many energy and materials companies.

The Chicago Board Options Exchange Volatility Index (VIX) started the reporting period just above 20 and spiked to 28 in February 2016, coinciding with stock market weakness. It then moved lower with a recovery in equities. Finally, the VIX rose in front of and on the day of the Brexit decision before reversing to close the reporting period at 11.9.

Portfolio Review

The Fund provided attractive income over the reporting period.

In the equity sleeve, information technology, health care and industrials sectors helped relative performance. Conversely, the consumer staples, financials and energy sectors hindered relative performance.

In the convertible sleeve, sectors that contributed positively to relative performance were energy, consumer staples and health care. On the other hand, technology, industrials and consumer discretionary pressured relative performance.

In the high-yield sleeve, industries that aided relative performance were utilities, banking and technology. In contrast, energy, theatres & entertainment and the metals/mining ex-steel industries hampered relative performance.

Regarding the covered call strategy, many option positions expired below strike and the portfolio was able to retain the set premiums.

Outlook

The short-term forecasts for the high yield, convertible, and equity markets are challenging. The path for all three markets may be choppy and, at times, may require strong conviction. Investors would be wise to take advantage of lower prices when they present themselves.

Outside of the US, aggressive quantitative-easing measures by global central banks remained in place, and on balance, this accommodative environment helped support the performance of risk assets.

Evidence of the appetite for risky assets was apparent when examining the returns for components of the convertible asset class. While yield-oriented or busted convertibles outperformed both total return and equity convertibles, the lowest quality and most distressed issuers substantially outperformed higher quality bonds. Although this trend reflected an improved fundamental backdrop, the outperformance of the lowest quality category was also technically driven, reflecting their oversold levels.

US economic data continued to be mixed, but overall, the trend in economic data reinforced the favorable conditions for convertibles and stocks.

AllianzGI NFJ Dividend, Interest & Premium Strategy Fund

For the period of February 1, 2016 through July 31, 2016 as provided by the NFJ Investment Team.

For the six-month period ended July 31, 2016, the AllianzGI NFJ Dividend, Interest & Premium Strategy Fund (the Fund) returned 10.75% on NAV and 16.23% on market price.

During the reporting period, the Russell 1000 Value Index, a measure of large-cap value style stocks, returned 15.34%; and convertibles securities, as reflected by the BofA Merrill Lynch All Convertibles Index, returned 13.66%.

Market Overview

US equities rallied strongly over the reporting period against a backdrop of the UK s June 23, 2016 Brexit vote and the Fed s decision to pause increases in interest rates. Signs that commodity prices may have stabilized and additional central bank stimulus measures overseas boosted investor sentiment, helping the market recover. Merger and acquisition activity remained subdued compared to the elevated levels seen in 2015, but share buybacks continued to underpin valuations: US share buybacks rose to $95 billion in February 2016, the third highest month on record. Equities in the S&P 500 Index touched a record closing high during the month of July as rising risk appetite and better than expected economic data helped to support valuations. Commodity prices largely trended upward as global uncertainty grew and the price of gold gained ground.

Within the Russell 1000 Value index, all ten GICS economic sectors delivered returns of 10% or more over the reporting period. Materials (39.8%) and telecom services (20.78%) led performance results, followed by 19%+ returns from the IT and industrials sectors. Consumer staples and financials posted the weakest results, gaining just 10%.

Investors gravitated toward risk assets during the reporting period, and one of the greatest beneficiaries of this trend was convertibles, which rallied alongside equities. Evidence of the appetite for risky assets was apparent when examining the returns for components of the convertible asset class. While yield-oriented or busted convertibles outperformed both total return and equity convertibles, the lowest quality and most distressed issuers substantially outperformed higher quality bonds. Although this trend reflected an improved fundamental backdrop, the outperformance of the lowest quality category was also technically driven, reflecting their oversold levels.

Strong US Treasury demand, driven by a weak global bond yield environment, also had a positive impact on convertibles as investors sought yield-oriented assets.
Finally, improving industry dynamics helped lift the price of crude oil and aided in the stabilization of other commodity prices. This had a positive credit impact for many energy and materials issuers in the convertible market.
New convertible issuance brought the year-to-date 2016 total to $17.4 billion. This compares with roughly $24.6 billion in maturities and redemptions.
Portfolio Review
The equity portion of the Fund delivered robust positive returns but failed to keep pace with the Russell 1000 Value Index. Negative stock selection offset positive sector allocation and drove relative underperformance during the reporting period. In terms of security selection, the Fund s holdings in IT and industrials were the most beneficial. However, these positive results were overwhelmed by negative selection in the financials, energy and materials sectors.
From a sector allocation perspective, overweight positions in materials and telecom services boosted the Fund s performance.
Conversely, the Fund s overweight in consumer discretionary and an underweight in health care somewhat detracted from results.

During the reporting period, within the equity portion of the Fund, the largest overweights relative to the Russell 1000 Value Index were in the telecom services, consumer discretionary and materials sectors. The Fund s largest relative underweights were in the consumer staples, materials and utilities sectors.

In the convertible sleeve, sectors that helped relative performance during the reporting period included energy, materials and consumer staples. An underweight in health care was beneficial, as was stock picking in the energy sector. In contrast, technology, telecom and consumer discretionary sector exposure weighed on performance. An overweight and issue selection in all three of the above-mentioned sectors was a detractor.

In the equity option sleeve, calls written on financials, technology and the energy sector added to returns, as the Fund was able to retain the premium on many of the options that were written, despite positive performances in these indexes over the period. Strong equity performance in the broader market, led by utilities and the S&P 500 Index (used to cover exposure in multiple sectors such as healthcare, industrials, and materials) which returned 16.8% and 13.3%, respectively, during the reporting period. The strong performance in the S&P 500 Index and utilities resulted in many of those option positions expiring in-the-money, requiring cash assignments in excess of the premium collected.

Outlook

The short-term forecasts for the convertible and equity markets are challenging. The path for all these markets may be choppy and, at times, may require strong conviction. We believe that investors would be wise to take advantage of lower prices when they present themselves.
