Key Competitive Statistics

Verizon / MCI Transaction

The following facts and statistics are taken from Verizon and MCI's Reply Comments, filed with the Federal Communications Commission, May 24, 2005

Enterprise Revenues

Verizon and MCI's combined enterprise revenues will be within a range of 16-22 percent, according to various sources. The combined share of Verizon/MCI is less than AT&T and SBC's combined share.

Overlapping facilities

There are approximately 39 groupings of contiguous wire-center areas in which Verizon and MCI have overlapping fiber. In the 39 areas, there are more than 90 different fiber suppliers; in 92 percent of the areas there are two or more suppliers in addition to Verizon and MCI; and there is at least one additional supplier in all but one of these areas. There is an average of nearly six competitors per wire center.

Internet Backbone

The combined company's share of the North American Internet backbone traffic carried is less than 10 percent, according to the best estimate.

After the transaction, the combined company would retain MCI's current ranking as the fourth largest of the seven comparable Internet backbone operators including AT&T, Sprint, Level 3, Qwest, SAVVIS, and AOL. The company would also continue to face
