AT&T to acquire Time Warner

To: All employees worldwide

Today we announced that Time Warner will merge with AT&T in a game-changing deal. Time Warner is the global leader in media and entertainment with marquee businesses, including HBO, Warner Bros. Entertainment and Turner.

The media and communications industries are converging. And when it comes down to it, premium content always wins. It has been true on the big screen, the TV screen, and now it's proving true on the mobile screen.

Household names like CNN, TNT, TBS and HBO, blockbuster shows like Game of Thrones and iconic films like Harry Potter, Lord of the Rings and American Sniper, are going to be joined with AT&T's unmatched customer relationships and distribution scale in TV, mobile and broadband to create a company like no other.

Only AT&T will have the world's best premium content with the networks to deliver it to every screen. Think about being able to watch every movie or every episode of every season for all the content Time Warner owns – and do that on any device, anytime, anywhere.

Besides great content, leading this industry also requires direct-to-customer distribution scale and we have it across TV, mobile and broadband in the U.S., mobile in Mexico and TV in Latin America.

We will be a company with content that's second to none and the networks to distribute it all the ways customers want: mobile, broadband, satellite, subscription, over-the-top, short- and long-form videos, skinny bundles, a la carte – you name it.

And with insights from 100 million plus customers who subscribe to our TV, mobile and broadband service, we will be able to offer more valuable, addressable advertising and use the insights to better inform us on what content to create and when and where to deliver it.

Our combined company will be positioned to compete against cable TV and other video providers with new customer choices – from content and distribution to a mobile-first experience that's personal and social.

This is the power of &. And it's the next logical step in our being the premier integrated communications company in the world. We believe this is the model that wins over time.

We expect to close this transaction by the end of 2017.

In the meantime, stay focused on serving our customers and we'll keep you informed of our progress along the way.
