CIBC ISSUES STATEMENT REGARDING AEROGOLD CONTRACT

TORONTO, May 14, 2003 CIBC is pleased that Justice James Farley has agreed to support a revised proposal to renew the Aerogold contract between CIBC and Air Canada.

We are gratified that this agreement removes any customer uncertainty concerning the future of the Aerogold card, said CIBC vice-chair Gerry McCaughey. We adjusted our contract in light of the value that the Aerogold franchise brings to both CIBC and Air Canada. Going forward, it is business as usual for CIBC Aerogold VISA cardholders. Customers can continue to earn and redeem Aeroplan miles using their cards at any of the more than 24 million locations worldwide that accept VISA.

CIBC has the leading credit card business in Canada with the number one market share both in card purchase volumes and average outstanding card balances. CIBC is also the leading issuer of premium credit cards based on purchase volumes.

Under the terms of the new contract, CIBC will pay Air Canada 24 per cent more per Aeroplan mile, an increase of four percentage points from the earlier agreement reached a few weeks ago. In addition, CIBC and Air Canada have agreed that exclusivity be relaxed to permit a card provider, which has been approved by CIBC, to participate in Aeroplan subject to restrictions approved by CIBC.

As previously announced in an April 17 news release, the contract will also extend CIBC's Aeroplan relationship to 2013 and CIBC will make a $350 million loan to Air Canada as a prepayment for Aeroplan miles. This payment will appear as an asset on CIBC's balance sheet and be reduced monthly as CIBC acquires points.

That release also noted that at the time the earlier contract was entered into, CIBC made a payment of $200 million to Air Canada that has been amortizing since that contract came into force on January 1, 2002. As at March 31, 2003 CIBC carried the payment at $181 million on its balance sheet. As previously announced, upon the new contract taking effect, CIBC will become an unsecured creditor of Air Canada for this unamortized balance and expects to take a charge of 23 cents a share on an after tax basis in the second quarter.

Thereafter, the net impact on CIBC's earnings of the higher cost per Aeroplan mile and the absence of the amortization is expected to be less than 10 cents per CIBC share per annum.

CIBC is a leading North American financial institution with almost nine million personal banking and business customers. CIBC offers a full range of products and services through its comprehensive electronic banking network, branches and offices across Canada, the United States and around the world.
